Course Descriptions

RPC-Hist-201 The History of the Christian Church to 1500

This course examines the development of the Christian Church and doctrine from Christian origins in the first century to the “harvest of medieval theology” in the work of Gabriel Biel. Special attention is given to the ecumenical councils of the church and the development and repudiation of the classical heresies. Emphasis is placed upon the relevance of church history for Christian proclamation.

RPC-Theo-201 Lutheran Reformers and the Book of Concord

This course examines the classical theological roots of the Lutheran Reformation, its leading figures, and its key documents -- especially those collected in the Book of Concord. The objective is that students learn to think theologically in the way the Lutheran Reformation. Major theological doctrines forged in the reformation are carefully considered in light of how they apply to parish ministry today.

RPC-Theo-202 Systematic Theology

This course explores from a Trinitarian perspective the traditional topics of theology: God, creation, fall, human beings, sin, Christ, justification, atonement, regeneration, Holy Spirit, sanctification, Church, sacraments, eschatology, and vocation.
